RE: Constitutional violation

Dear Ms. Kakabar and Mr. Thomas,

A student from Ferndale Area High School has contacted our office to request assistance with regard to what is correctly perceived as a constitutional violation that has been occurring regularly under the authority of your school and school district. The student reports a pattern of coercion in connection the school's daily Pledge of Allegiance exercise, as she has not been allowed to sit out the exercise and in fact has been inappropriately threatened with discipline and lectured when she has attempted to do so. As you probably know, the right of students to opt out of Pledge participation was settled long ago by the United States Supreme Court in West Virginia State Bd. of Educ. v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624 (1943). Consequently, any actions by your school or its agents infringing upon that right would be actionable as a serious constitutional violation.

The student in question, currently in tenth grade, does not wish to participate in the Pledge exercise in any manner because she objects to the recitation on several grounds, including the "under God" language in particular. As an atheist, she feels that such a statement is untrue and does not belong in any government-sponsored pledge. As such, she has attempted to simply sit at her desk during the exercise in an undisruptive manner. When she has done this, however, she has been ordered by her teacher to stand with the threat of discipline for refusing to do so. The student has also been lectured for attempting to opt out, having been told by her teacher that failure to participate in the exercise was somehow an insult to those who have served in the military. Moreover, we have been informed that other students in the school have also been told to stand for the exercise against their will, and that the school handbook was recently changed to include a requirement that students stand during the Pledge exercise.

Based on the above, we demand that this situation be remedied immediately. This letter seeks immediate assurances: (1) That students and teachers at in your school district be advised that students may stay seated for any Pledge exercise at the school and that any written policy containing a standing requirement be rescinded; (2) That teachers be instructed that under no circumstances should they attempt to persuade students to refrain from exercising the right to nonparticipation, question students as to the reason for nonparticipation, or characterize opting out as misconduct (or as being insulting to troops or otherwise wrongful); and (3) That no disciplinary or other retaliatory measures of any kind will be directed toward any student for nonparticipation in the Pledge exercise.

The American Humanist Association (AHA) is a national nonprofit organization with over 330,000 supporters and members across the country, including many in Pennsylvania. The mission of AHA's legal center is to protect one of the most fundamental principles of our democracy: the First Amendment rights to free speech and religious liberty. Our legal center includes a network of cooperating attorneys from around the country, including Pennsylvania, and we have litigated constitutional cases in state and federal courts from coast to coast.

Since the Supreme Court's ruling in Barnette, federal courts have irrefutably recognized the First Amendment right of students to remain silent and seated during the Pledge.¹ That "students have a constitutional right to remain seated during the Pledge is well established." Frazier v. Winn, 535 F.3d 1279, 1282 (11th Cir. 2008) (per curiam), cert. denied, 558 U.S. 818 (2009) (finding that all public school students have the First Amendment right not to stand during the Pledge). See also Holloman ex rel. Holloman v. Harland, 370 F.3d 1252, 1274, 1278-79 (11th Cir. 2004) (noting that the right to remain seated and silent during the Pledge is "clearly established"); Walker-Serrano ex rel. Walker v. Leonard, 325 F.3d 412, 417 (3d Cir. 2003) ("For over fifty years, the law has protected elementary students' rights to refrain from reciting the pledge of allegiance to our flag. Punishing a child for non-disruptively expressing her opposition to recitation of the pledge would seem to be as offensive to the First Amendment as requiring its oration.") (citation omitted); Rabideau v. Beekmantown Cent. Sch. Dist., 89 F. Supp. 2d 263, 267 (N.D.N.Y. 2000) ("It is well established that a school may not require its students to stand for or recite the Pledge of Allegiance or punish any student for his/her failure to do so.") (citing Barnette, 319 U.S. 624; Russo v. Cent. Sch. Dist. No. 1, 469 F.2d 623 (2d Cir. 1972)).

Indeed, the federal appellate courts have been unanimous in concluding that public school officials are prohibited from compelling students to stand during the Pledge. See, e.g., Frazier, 535 F.3d at 1282; Holloman, 370 at 1274-79; Circle Sch. v. Pappert, 381 F.3d 172, 178 (3d Cir. 2004); Walker, 325 F.3d at 417; Lipp v. Morris, 579 F.2d 834, 836 (3d Cir. 1978) (ruling that a state statute requiring students to stand during the Pledge was an unconstitutional compulsion of expression); Goetz v. Ansell, 477 F.2d 636, 637-38 (2d Cir. 1973) (holding that a student has the right to remain quietly seated during the Pledge and cannot be compelled to leave the room if he chooses not to stand); Banks v. Bd. of Public Instruction, 314 F. Supp. 285, 294-96 (S.D. Fla. 1970), aff'd, 450 F.2d 1103 (5th Cir. 1971) (concluding that a rule requiring students to stand during the Pledge was unconstitutional). See also Newdow v. United States Cong., 328 F.3d 466, 489 (9th Cir. 2002) (noting that schools may not “coerce impressionable young schoolchildren to recite [the Pledge], or even to stand mute while it is being recited by their classmates.”).

Federal district courts and state courts have also consistently ruled that students have a constitutional right to remain silent and seated during the Pledge. See Rabideau, 89 F. Supp. 2d at 267; Frain v. Baron, 307 F.Supp. 27, 33-34 (E.D.N.Y. 1969) (enjoining school from “excluding [students] from their classrooms during the Pledge of Allegiance, or from treating any student who refuses for reasons of conscience to participate in the Pledge in any different way from those who participate.”); State v. Lundquist, 262 Md. 534, 554-55 (Md. 1971) (state statute requiring teachers and students to salute the flag during the Pledge violated the First Amendment freedom of speech clause). Cf. Sheldon v. Fannin, 221 F. Supp. 766, 768 (D. Ariz. 1963) (enjoining elementary school from suspending Jehovah’s Witness students solely because they silently refused to stand for the national anthem).

The student here does not deserve to be disciplined merely because she chooses to exercise her constitutional rights. Indeed, instead of rote recitation, she has given thoughtful consideration of the underlying religious and political issues raised by the exercise, and this should, if anything, earn her the respect of teachers. In Tinker v. Des Moines Indep. Cmty. Sch. Dist., 393 U.S. 503, 506-07 (1969), the Supreme Court famously declared: “It can hardly be argued that either students or teachers shed their constitutional rights to freedom of speech or expression at the schoolhouse gate. This has been the unmistakable holding of this Court for almost 50 years.” (citing Barnette, among other cases)

In Banks, the court applied Tinker to the act of refusing to stand for the Pledge and held: “The conduct of Andrew Banks in refusing to stand during the pledge ceremony constituted an expression of his religious beliefs and political opinions. His refusal to stand was no less a form of expression than the wearing of the black armband was to Mary Beth Tinker. He was exercising a right ‘akin to pure speech.’” 314 F. Supp at 295. Importantly, not only do students have the right to silently sit during the Pledge, but they also have a right to affirmatively protest the Pledge exercise. See Holloman, 370 F.3d at 1273-74 (raising fist during Pledge was protected speech even if fellow classmates found it objectionable and distracting). Referring to Banks, the Eleventh Circuit pointed out in Holloman that “its ruling was not based on Banks's First Amendment right to remain silent, but his First Amendment right to affirmatively express himself.” 370 F.3d at 1273-74 (emphasis added).

We are most hopeful that you will recognize the concerns raised by this letter and address them properly. Please respond within seven (7) days. We thank you in advance for your attention to this matter.

Very truly yours,
Monica Miller, Esq.
