

North American Committee
for Humanism

Humanism Today is a publication of the North American Committee for Humanism (NACH) and the Humanist Institute.

NACH was established in 1982 by leaders of the six major humanist organization in North America to serve as a coordinating agency for humanism on this continent. During the past seven years it has sponsored many joint projects. The most important creation of NACH is the Humanist Institute, which serves as an intellectual center for humanism on this continent, and which trains the future leaders of our movement.

This publication, which is produced in cooperation with the faculty of the Humanist Institute, is an expression of our commitment to encourage meaningful humanist dialogue on important philosophic and ethical issues. We hope that it will contribute to strengthening our movement.
